

Qlik® for sales management

Qlik helps organizations improve their sales management activities, including forecasting of revenue and tracking of performance against goals. Sales managers can freely explore their team’s performance and pipeline, from high-level teams down to the individual transaction level, to quickly spot and respond to outliers and concerns.

Because Qlik is so easy to use, sales managers do not have to rely on analysts or IT to produce reports or answer follow-up questions. They can create their own territory and team analysis, integrating data from multiple sources, and discover unique relationships between customer buying behaviors in relation to their activity.

This results in a more predictable and effective sales process at the team, regional, and corporate levels — allowing users to see the whole story that lives within their data.
