

Qlik® for sales representatives

Qlik sales solutions are used across industries to help organizations improve the quantity and quality of their customer interactions. Traditional tools can produce pre-defined reports centrally, but allowing sales representatives to gain their own insights based on individual criteria is not possible.

With Qlik, all this changes. Salespeople can now freely explore customer and sales data to better pinpoint prospects for cross-sell and up-sell opportunities, promotions, and new products. Personalized target lists can be created and analyzed on the fly while still improving the preparation for, and effectiveness of, customer interactions.

The result is a highly tuned outbound sales effort with increased call volume, call quality, conversion rates, and revenue. Sales organizations can see the whole story that lives within their data, regardless of the data sources, through interactive applications where actionable insights lead to better decision making and outcomes.
